✓ Doctype Doctype is the first line of the HTML document. It tells the browser which version of HTML the page is written in.

Doctype is the first line of the HTML document. It tells the browser which version of HTML the page is written in. The most common doctype is HTML5. Other versions include HTML4.01 Strict, HTML4.01 Transitional, and XHTML1.0 Strict. The doctype is important because it affects the rendering of the page. If the doctype is not declared, the browser will use its default rendering mode, which is Quirks Mode. This can cause the page to render incorrectly. To avoid this, you should always declare the doctype at the beginning of your HTML document.

⊙ W3C Validity W3C Validity is a tool that checks if your HTML code is valid according to the W3C standards.

W3C - World Wide Web Consortium is an international community that develops standards for the World Wide Web. One of their main goals is to ensure that web pages are accessible to everyone, regardless of the device or browser they are using. W3C Validity is a tool that checks if your HTML code is valid according to the W3C standards. It can help you identify and fix errors in your code, ensuring that your website is compliant with the latest standards. This is important for ensuring that your website is accessible and works correctly across all devices and browsers.

✓ Charset Charset is the character set used to encode the text in the document. It is usually UTF-8.

Charset is the character set used to encode the text in the document. It is usually UTF-8. The charset is important because it determines how the browser will interpret the characters in the document. If the charset is not declared, the browser will use its default character set, which is usually Windows-1252. This can cause the page to render incorrectly, especially if the page contains characters from other character sets. To avoid this, you should always declare the charset at the beginning of your HTML document.
